

Tips On Choosing A Suit Designer

Contributed by Victor Santerino
Saturday, 06 September 2008

Determining which suit designer is best for you is a necessary skill in this day and age. The media tells us what to eat, what to drink, and even what to wear. However, sometimes we need to take a step back and do what is right for us.

Determining which suit designer is best for you is a necessary skill in this day and age. The media tells us what to eat, what to drink, and even what to wear. However, sometimes we need to take a step back and do what is right for us.

This article was written to help you make the tough choices that you need to make when outfitting your wardrobe. Read this article carefully and your next purchase will be one of the greatest experiences of the year.

Designer suits always start out at the shoulders and lapels. Vintage suits will always have wider lapels, while contemporary suits will usually have medium sized lapels. Look for a more aggressive urban look in the more modern designers.

The man with a medium build has more choices than the thinner and larger builds. The only word of caution is to get a suit jacket with a shoulder that has a natural looking padding to it. Suits to consider are Mantoni, Zanetti, and Copley.

Large men need to look into getting broader lapels and lightly padded shoulders. Suits to consider are Haggar, Bill Blass, and Perry Ellis. These designers provide a nice lineup for the over sized man.

Slim men need to look into a more urban look with streamlined shoulders and lapels. Designers that provide this look include: Michael Kors, Kenneth Cole, Jones of New York, and Sean John. Wear these suits to enhance your overall appeal and give you a more aggressive look.

Suit pants differ in style from designer to designer. Thick lapels will almost always be matched up with double pleats. Thin lapels will have flat fronted pants to compliment them, while medium sized will have standard pleats.

Thin men should flaunt their lean legs with a style of pants that comes in a flat front model. Wear pants without button pockets on the back and opt for only one slit pocket. This will show off a leaner body rather than hide it behind a pair of pleats and button down pockets.

The medium sized man can wear any style of pants he deems appropriate. However, this man should take into account the type and style jacket he chooses to accompany the suit pants.

Big men would be advised to buy a suit with pleats or double pleats. Pleated pants do a great job at drawing attention to the suit rather than the mans leg. These pants are perfect for making anyone look fit.

About the Author:

To learn more Kenneth Cole Suits about go to our Designer Suits page.